

Continue to expect subdued inflation levels

Friday, May 24, 2019

Key Points

- Headline inflation was stable and subdued at 0.2% yoy, below both consensus and our forecast at 0.4% yoy.
- Inflation this year has been affected by the lingering effects of one off government policies.
- Among these include the tax regime change, which should wear off from June onwards but the wearing off may be more sharply felt from June – August.
- That said, the Festive Season Price Control Scheme that is to run for 30 days from 21st May onwards may temper price increases in May and June.
- Going forward, we do not expect any meaningful increases in prices for May.
- We also don't believe the central bank would read too much into the current inflation prints given the temporary nature of it.

Treasury Research
Tel: 6530-8384

Headline inflation remained stable and subdued at 0.2% yoy for April (March 2019: 0.2% yoy), below both consensus and our forecast at 0.4% yoy. The same can be said of core inflation which was static at 0.5% yoy (March 2019: 0.5% yoy). Among the more heavily weighted groups, the food and non-alcoholic beverages and housing, water, electricity, gas and other fuels saw an increase of 1.1% yoy and 2.0% yoy respectively. However, this was also offset by a fall in prices for the transport and miscellaneous goods and services groups at 2.6% yoy and 2.0% yoy respectively.

Inflation as a whole continues to be affected by the lingering effects of one-off government policies. These include the tax regime change, the lowering of broadband prices and the capping of fuel prices. The effect from the tax regime change should start to wear off from June 2019 onwards. This regime change in 2018 had involved a tax holiday period from June – August 2018 before the SST was introduced from September 2018 onwards. Hence, it is likely that the wearing off may be more sharply felt from June – August 2019. That said, the Festive Season Price Control Scheme that is to run for 30 days from 21st May 2019 onwards may temper price increases in May and June. For the next few months, do closely watch if the government will make changes to the current fuel price cap program and possibly introduce a targeted fuel subsidy scheme.

Going forward, we are therefore not expecting any meaningful increase in prices for May. As a whole, we don't believe that the central bank would read too much into the current inflation print given the temporary nature of it.

Alan Lau
Tel: 6530-5949
AlanLau@ocbc.com

Chart 1: Contributors to Headline Inflation, % yoy

Source: CEIC, Bloomberg and OCBC

This publication is solely for information purposes only and may not be published, circulated, reproduced or distributed in whole or in part to any other person without our prior written consent. This publication should not be construed as an offer or solicitation for the subscription, purchase or sale of the securities/instruments mentioned herein. Any forecast on the economy, stock market, bond market and economic trends of the markets provided is not necessarily indicative of the future or likely performance of the securities/instruments. Whilst the information contained herein has been compiled from sources believed to be reliable and we have taken all reasonable care to ensure that the information contained in this publication is not untrue or misleading at the time of publication, we cannot guarantee and we make no representation as to its accuracy or completeness, and you should not act on it without first independently verifying its contents. The securities/instruments mentioned in this publication may not be suitable for investment by all investors. Any opinion or estimate contained in this report is subject to change without notice. We have not given any consideration to and we have not made any investigation of the investment objectives, financial situation or particular needs of the recipient or any class of persons, and accordingly, no warranty whatsoever is given and no liability whatsoever is accepted for any loss arising whether directly or indirectly as a result of the recipient or any class of persons acting on such information or opinion or estimate. This publication may cover a wide range of topics and is not intended to be a comprehensive study or to provide any recommendation or advice on personal investing or financial planning. Accordingly, they should not be relied on or treated as a substitute for specific advice concerning individual situations. Please seek advice from a financial adviser regarding the suitability of any investment product taking into account your specific investment objectives, financial situation or particular needs before you make a commitment to purchase the investment product. OCBC Bank, its related companies, their respective directors and/or employees (collectively "Related Persons") may or might have in the future interests in the investment products or the issuers mentioned herein. Such interests include effecting transactions in such investment products, and providing broking, investment banking and other financial services to such issuers. OCBC Bank and its Related Persons may also be related to, and receive fees from, providers of such investment products.

This report is intended for your sole use and information. By accepting this report, you agree that you shall not share, communicate, distribute, deliver a copy of or otherwise disclose in any way all or any part of this report or any information contained herein (such report, part thereof and information, "Relevant Materials") to any person or entity (including, without limitation, any overseas office, affiliate, parent entity, subsidiary entity or related entity) (any such person or entity, a "Relevant Entity") in breach of any law, rule, regulation, guidance or similar. In particular, you agree not to share, communicate, distribute, deliver or otherwise disclose any Relevant Materials to any Relevant Entity that is subject to the Markets in Financial Instruments Directive (2014/65/EU) ("MiFID") and the EU's Markets in Financial Instruments Regulation (600/2014) ("MiFIR") (together referred to as "MiFID II"), or any part thereof, as implemented in any jurisdiction. No member of the OCBC Group shall be liable or responsible for the compliance by you or any Relevant Entity with any law, rule, regulation, guidance or similar (including, without limitation, MiFID II, as implemented in any jurisdiction).

Co.Reg.no.:193200032W