Highlights

	Risk sentiment consolidated ahead of G7 meeting this weekend as well as major central bank meetings including ECB and FOMC next week. President Trump's tweet accusing France and Canada's massive trade surplus with the US as well as their non-monetary barriers to trade ahead of planned bilateral meeting in G7 meeting did not bode well for risk sentiment. In a volatile session, 10-year US Treasury yield ended down at 2.93% after hitting a high of 2.994% earlier on Thursday. The focus of trade tension is expected to shift
oal	from US-China to US-G6 in the near term after the US Commerce
Globa	Department reached a deal to lift the ban for ZTE. ZTE will receive the most severe penalty imposed by US Commerce Department according to the statements form the department. Other than the US$1.4 billion fine, management and board will be changed and US will install its "own compliance people" to monitor the company.
	Elsewhere, both Brazil and Turkey have stepped up their efforts via foreign exchange swaps or interest rate hike to defend their currency stability. Market will monitor whether there will be any contagion risk from those two countries to other EM countries.
	Risk of a technical recession heightened again after the revised 1Q GDP
0	contracted at an annualized 0.6% from previous quarter, unchanged from the ٦ ص	preliminary estimate. Private consumption was revised down to show a slight decline of 0.1%. The weaker than expected domestic demand may weigh down the growth outlook in the coming quarters.
	The country's FX reserve fell slightly to US$3.11 trillion in May from S	US$3.124 trillion in April. The decline was lower than expected despite negative valuation effect as a result of strong dollar and volatile asset prices in May. This suggests that China's capital flow remains relatively balanced.
	Foreign reserves fell to $108.5bn as of 31st May 2018 (15th May 2018:
ΔA	$109.4bn) whilst the MYR still remained below 4.00 against the USD yesterday.
	According to Bloomberg, central bank governor Perry Warjiyo has made clear his intentions to "pre-empt uncertainty" by using interest rates in a measured ₽	way to restore confidence and support the nation's currency. The IDR though weakened yesterday as the value of the USD – IDR increased by 0.12%.
	Sanctions fear dominate market sentiments, with market-watchers digesting news over Iran and Venezuela's efforts to rally support from their OPEC peers against US-led sanctions. With the OPEC meeting towards the third week of June, investors will likely glean closely on three key issues (1)
CMD	OPEC's response to US-led sanctions against some of its members, (2)
ပ	Saudi Arabia's official call to raise 2H18 supplies and (3) potentially hints over when and how the current production curb may end. As mentioned in our past reports, we continue to stay cautious over oil's rally given the heightened possibility for Saudi Arabia to raise production, amid US' unrelentless rise in supplies since 2017.

Major Market

- US: Wall Street ended mixed as the Dow added 0.38% while the S&P 500 and Nasdaq composite fell 0.07% and 0.7%, respectively as investors continued to weigh the impact of the ongoing trade tensions as well as anticipate the G7 summit between leaders. Additionally, the following week sees several major geopolitical and economic events taking place the ECB meeting, the June FOMC as well as the highly anticipated Trump-Kim summit in Singapore. However, news that the US and China have reached a deal that would see ZTE back in business for now should bode well for investors today. VIX edged slightly up to 12.13 on Thursday, compared to 11.64 on Wednesday. Over at the treasuries front, the 2y benchmark yield fell 2bps to 2.488%. Similarly, the 10y yield lost 5bps to close down at 2.920%.
- Singapore: The STI added 0.15% on Thursday, closing up at 3,473.08. Gains registered by City Developments Ltd (+2.41%) and Hongkong Land Holdings Ltd (+1.80%) supported the index while Golden Agri-Resources Ltd (-3.12%) and Venture Corp Ltd (-2.06%) declined. The index may trade cautiously today ahead of the mixed cues from Wall Street and morning losses seen from Nikkei and Kospi.
