

Highlights

Global	The risk sentiment improved on Friday after the Italian political turmoil made a U-turn. In addition, the strong US job market data also fuelled further optimism about the economy. The Italian government was finally formed on Friday after three months of political deadlock. More importantly, a fresh round of elections was avoided. The Italian President's "gamble" to reject the Eurosceptic Economy Minister nominee paid off. The latest poll showed that more than 60% of Italians did not want to abandon the Euro. With the departure of a Eurosceptic candidate, the newly formed government is unlikely to fuel Euro Exit concerns though it may challenge the Eurozone's fiscal austerity stance. On trade tensions, US and China ended the trade talk over the weekend with no concrete deals despite the talk being described as "friendly and frank" by US Commerce Secretary Ross. China failed to obtain the commitment from Washington to stop going ahead with its tariff threats which was unexpectedly revived last week ahead of the trade talks. In a unilateral statement, China said it will not comply with any deal if US decides to go ahead with tariff after 15 June. Market will continue to watch out for how President Trump wants to play his unpredictability card, which will be the new normal for global diplomatic relationships. The road ahead is expected to remain bumpy.
US	Job growth accelerated in May while unemployment rate fell to its 18-year low of 3.8%, highlighting US' economic resilience and tighter labour market. Nonfarm payrolls rose 223k last month while average hourly earnings also gained for its seventh consecutive month into May 2018.
CN	On policy, China announced fresh measures to deepen its de-leverage campaign. The latest measure targets the syndicated loan to big companies, which will discourage bank's excessive credit exposure to large companies via syndicated loan. Additionally, the central bank announced to expand its scope of collateral for its medium term lending facility. We think the latest expansion is positive for market sentiment.
KR	BOK governor Lee Ju-yeol cited the risk of "sudden capital outflows and market unrest (that) can happen at any time" in events when advanced economies normalise their respective monetary policies. He added that it is "important to coordinate monetary and macroprudential policies" to ensure financial stability.
CMD	The WTI-Brent spread widened further, fuelled by a substantial drop in WTI futures over the weekend. Oil prices have been battered down over several trading days since last week on expectations on higher oil supplies into 2H18, though dollar strength seen over the said period could have also contributed to higher prices. Note that WTI is near our average year-end outlook of $65/bbl, though Brent's considerable premium to WTI at $10.98/bbl appears to be uncomfortably elevated and must be deliberated should it persist into year-end. Further dollar strength also left precious metal prices lower (ex-palladium which rose 1.5%), but note recent CFTC positioning data which showed money managers accumulating the most net-long bets in gold and other defensive commodities like sugar and grains, suggesting that risk-off appetite could eventually lead gold prices higher into the week ahead.

Major Market

- US: Wall Street rose Friday as positive labour data boosted investors' risk taking sentiment. Nonfarm payrolls rose to 223k, surpassing market expectations of 190k. Similarly, unemployment dropped to 3.8% in May, as compared with April's 3.9%, to reach its lowest since 2000. However, trade tensions still continue to loom and pose a threat to the rather sanguine outlook. Market will be watching in anticipation for any further escalation on the trade front. Furthermore, G7 members meet this week in Quebec for the G7 summit. Of late, finance ministers of the G7 allies released a sharply worded statement taking aim at the Trump administration's metal import tariffs prior to the summit. Overall, the Dow Jones advanced 0.9%. Similarly, the S&P 500 as well as the Nasdaq composite added 1.08% and 1.51% respectively. VIX settled back down at 13.46 as compared with Thursday's 15.43. Meanwhile, the 2y and 10y treasury yields rose 4bps to close up at 2.480% and 2.902%, respectively.
- Singapore: The STI index slid 0.02% to continue a three-session streak of declines, closing down at 3,427.51 on Friday. Counters in focus include Yangzijiang Shipbuilding Holdings Ltd (+6.74%) and Singapore Press Holdings Ltd (+2.68%). Meanwhile, losses registered by Hutchison Port Holdings Trust (-1.82%) and CapitaLand Commercial Trust (-1.17%) dragged the index lower. The index may trade firmer today amid positive cues from Wall Street and morning gains in Nikkei and Kospi.
- China: However, the expansion of the central bank's scope of collateral for its medium term lending facility may also create confusion, which may downplay market expectation on reserve requirement ratio cut as the expansion of collateral seems meaningless if China continues to cut the RRR to swap MLF to reduce the total outstanding of MLFs. There is one similar motivation behind both non-relevant policy announcements on Friday which China wants to further support SMEs funding.
- Indonesia: The manufacturing PMI rose to a 23-month high of 51.7 in May with growth underpinned by the fastest rise in new orders since July 2014. This was apparently driven by stronger domestic demand based on anecdotal evidence. Inflationary pressures also picked up with the input costs rising at the sharpest rate in over two-and-a-half years. Optimism surrounding business prospects in the next 12 months strengthened to a three-months high.
- Malaysia: The manufacturing PMI fell to an 11-month low of 47.6 in May. This was predominantly driven by the sharpest fall in new business since December 2016. New export orders fell for the fourth successive month in a row. However, the rate of decline moderated to the weakest in three months. Business sentiment though remained above the historical average. Meanwhile, according to Bloomberg, Moody's has said that they are still clarifying the ministry's 80% estimate but they also mentioned the fact that it doesn't seem to include new debt suggests no rating implication.
- Thailand: Inflation rose faster than expected by 1.49% y/y (+0.56% momsa) in May, while core inflation rose 0.80%. This is higher up from our call for headline inflation to climb 1.2%. Accounting for May's inflation, it marks the third month of acceleration in CPI, and is at its highest since Jan 2017. Unsurprisingly, higher energy prices (+7.7% y/y), which consequently led transport prices higher (+3.3% y/y) were the key inflation drivers last month. Additionally, former deputy premier Suthep Thaugsuban, who formerly vowed to never return to politics, reportedly applied to join the Action Coalition of Thailand (ACT) Party, according to The Nation.

- Macau: The growth of gross gaming revenue decelerated from April's 27.6% yoy to 12.1% yoy in May. High base effect is set to decelerate the gaming revenue growth in the coming months. However, it will not derail the revival of the gaming sector. Tourism activities are set to improve further on the back of Asia's sustained growth, a weaker MOP and infrastructure improvement. This would bring more recreational gamblers to the city. As such, even if VIP segment is facing policy risks, overall gaming performance could remain resilient. We hold onto our view that gross gaming revenue will advance by 10%-15% in 2018.

Bond Market Updates

- Market Commentary: The SGD swap curve steepened last Friday, with swap rates trading 3bps higher across most tenors. The Bloomberg Barclays Asia USD IG Bond Index average OAS was unchanged at 138bps and the Bloomberg Barclays Asia USD HY Bond Index average OAS tightened 9bps to 460bps. 10Y UST yield rose 4bps to 2.90%, on the back of better-than-expected non-farm payrolls data reported last Friday.
- New issues: China Construction Bank Corp Hong Kong Branch has priced a USD1.5bn deal across two-tranches with the USD900mn 3-year FRN priced at 3mL+73bps, tightening from its initial price guidance of 3mL+100bps and the USD600mn 5-year FRN priced at 3mL+83bps, tightening from its initial price guidance of 3mL+110bps. Sichuan Development Holding Co Ltd has scheduled for investor meetings from 4 June for its potential USD bond issuance. Harbin Investment Group Co Ltd has scheduled for investor meetings from 4 June for its potential USD bond issuance.
